Let your Chevy do the shopping

Vicki Perry was shopping at the Ernst Home Center in Orem Thursday night when she heard the gunning of an engine outside. With the crashing of glass, she turned around to see, "a car driving in the front door heading straight down the center aisle."

"Everyone froze as the car drove all the way up to within 15 feet of the back wall pushing shelves to the side as he went," Mrs. Perry, of 136 W. Center, Springville, said. As the silver Chevy Manza passed the cash register someone yelled for the number of Orem police, who were called immediately.

Tire tracks were left on the floor of the store as the driver apparently accelerated to where he was stopped when the space between the shelves got too narrow to proceed.

"I couldn't believe it, some customer was still just standing at the cash register paying for his stuff like nothing was going on." Everyone was ordered out of the store by the employees, Mrs Perry said, at which time the driver, Howard R. Greenhalgh of Pleasant Grove, got out of the car and left the store. "One of the other customers yelled, 'Hey where are you going.' the driver then turned and kind of tried to kung-fu kick the guy in the head."

"Five male customers then jumped on top of him and started wrestling around on the sidewalk out in front of the store," she continued. "The police arrived and put handcuffs on him and he didn't calm down any."

Other witnesses reported that he had cut his head and an ambulance was called in to take him to the hospital. Holland Severns, night manager at Ernst estimated the damage to the store at $20,000.

Star Palace defies city closure notice

By NANCY BENAC & DEANA LLOYD
Universe Staff Writers

"Burning out of control, disco inferno...."

The Star Palace disco, by failing to comply with building and fire safety requirements, could become a true disco inferno. Provo City, in an effort to avoid such an accident, ordered the temporary closure of the disco.

Despite the order to close, the disco opened Thursday night for the Deseret Towers dance. Brent Weeks, part owner and manager of the Star Palace, said he plans to stay open while bringing the building up to standard.

The city's order to close caused confusion as word spread to dance sponsors Randy Gleaves and Robert Bellus and the residents of Deseret Towers. Charles Fife, president of the Deseret Towers council, first said that the dance would be cancelled. After talking with Weeks and Gleaves, Fife said, "I talked to Star Palace and they said it was open. No one has officially told us it's closed."

After the decision to close the building was made, "They (Weeks) called the city and asked what was the worst thing that could happen if they opened. The city said Weeks would receive a citation and a fine and we said, 'see you at the dance tonight,' " said Gleaves.

The dance went on as scheduled Thursday night, but not without city officials taking notice. R. A. Dalrymple, building inspector, and Robert Bryson, fire inspector, issued a citation to Weeks for opening without an occupancy permit, or a business license, and failing to install a sprinkler system.

"It doesn't matter," Weeks said, when asked if he would plead guilty or not guilty, after the citation had been issued, "I don't know. I don't know what the citation says."

Weeks is also in violation of the law for removing signs notifying the public about the closure. "It is unlawful to occupy this building prior to final inspection" the placards read. These signs were posted on the doors of the disco by the fire inspector earlier in the day after the decision to close the disco.

Dalrymple said they would not cite Weeks for removing the warnings, at the present time, but would "save that for a day or so."

The decision to close the disco came after Weeks and his partner, Ross Anderson, failed to make the improvements required by the building and fire inspectors.

"They had 120 days to rectify the problem and they haven't even started," J. Earl Wignall, Provo city commissioner said.

A letter of notification of closure from Glen Ellis, Provo City attorney, was given to Weeks by Provo Mayor James E. Ferguson. "He was so deeply involved with promoting the business that these matters had been left undone," the letter read.

"The city has worked with us throughout this time. We are bringing the Star Palace into compliance," said Weeks. "I am meeting with companies to see that the requirements are met soon."

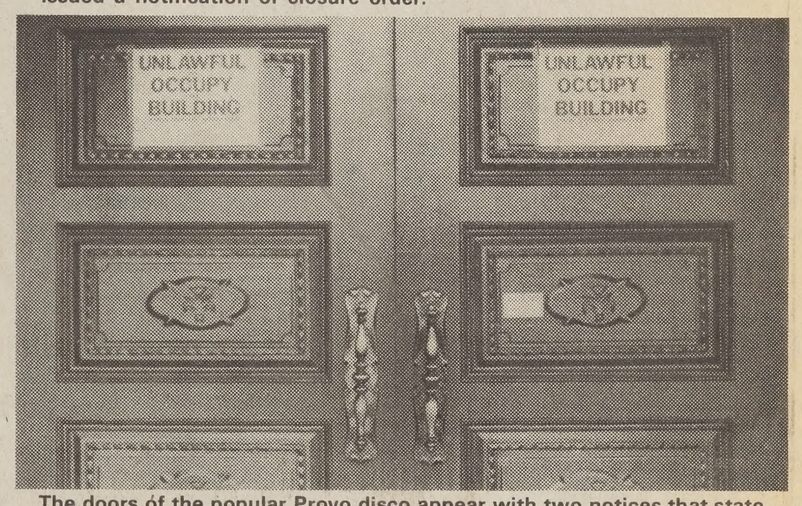
Provo City Building Inspector, R. A. Dalrymple (right) issues citation to Brent Weeks (left), part owner and manager of Star Palace discotheque for opening without an occupancy permit, or business license and failure to install a fire preventive sprinkler system after the city had earlier issued a notification of closure order.



The doors of the popular Provo disco appear with two notices that state it is unlawful to occupy the building until final inspection has been completed.

The main concern of the city officials is the absence of a sprinkling system. "A fire could get hot enough to collapse the steel joists in the attic in three minutes," Bryson said.

Eight other items are also listed as deficiencies in the notification of closure letter from the city attorney. They include; no fire retardent treatment on some of the raw wood in the building, no exterior lighting on rear exits, temporary wood structures serving as rear exit landings, as well as five other items involving structural hazards.

"We allowed them to open in good faith assuming that they would order the sprinkling system and they didn't," City Commissioner Anagene Meecham said, during a meeting with city officials. In a later meeting with Weeks, Meecham said, "The average person would have started immediately. You haven't even talked about it."

"I've talked with one company and have appointments with other companies this afternoon. The drawings should be done next week," Weeks responded.

"I want to make some deal with you or I will get a court injunction. I'm positive I can," Weeks said. "Legally you can't close me down any more than you can close Uncle Marios."

"The judge may give you an injunction. Everybody is between a rock and a hard place because of inaction on your part," Mayor Ferguson said.

When first asked when he would apply for an injunction, Weeks said, "I don't know. When the sun comes up." He later said he would probably apply today.

The Star Palace might be open in spite of the closure order, but "we won't allow them to stay open indefinitely," said Ellis.

Women's conference

A major challenge, coping

By SALLY VEACH
Universe Staff Writer

The major challenge facing women is ing appropriately with changes, Elaine Cannon, LDS Young men's president, Thursday.

Mrs. Cannon, the first keynote aker for the annual Women's Conence said there are different types of nge that are important to think ut. One type of change, such as th, is swift, painful and untimely. ers are more subtle and gradual — h as the breakdown of a tionship between a parent and a d.

These things can change our lives ending on how we cope with what es into our lives by way of change," said. "We can sometimes cope by epting the inevitable that changes occur."

Mrs. Cannon mentioned major areas of change in the world, including the definition of family life. She noted one case of a a man and his wife who were granted a "divorce" from their teenage child because they were weary of struggling with her teenage problems.

Discipline by the patriarch of the home is decreasing, she added.

Mrs. Cannon said one of the most important messages she had to give is that God lives, and if women cope with what happens to them in their lives appropriately, they will grow in such a way that they will qualify for the kingdom of God.

"All of us here on earth," she said, "are involved in God's plan for his children to grow. He has given us principles to live by, and many changes will take place in our lives as trials, tests, and temptations come into our lives to experience. Therefore, we must learn to cope with what happens to us in order to qualify for happiness now and ultimately to see our Heavenly Father and know that he is."

Mrs. Cannon said it is important to remember to call upon the Lord for help.

"We are foolish, time is wasting, and lives are being lost if we don't call upon him," she said. She recited the scripture Mormon 5:2 where the Nephite general said his people were without hope because they struggled for their lives without calling on the Lord.

"Our challenge in change is to cope," she said, "and the challenge in coping is to find the system that is God-given, not struggle for our lives without calling upon him."

Mrs. Cannon suggested some scriptures which she felt were important in helping to cope with the changes in today's world.

One scripture she mentioned was Doctrine and Covenants, Section 9.

"This scripture deals with making the proper preparation for making a decision and then going to the Lord for ratification," Mrs. Cannon said. "Then we need to recognize the sweet, sweet blessing of the burning bosom."

Another scripture Mrs. Cannon spoke of was Moroni, Chapter 7, which she said talks about using the gospel as a measuring yardstick for making the proper decisions.

"We must keep every new thrust of the world, every assault on your system, every change in your body, every situation of pressure or disappointment, and keep them in perspective and hold them up against the yardstick of the gospel," she said.

The last scripture she spoke of was Moroni, Chapter 10, dealing with thinking through decisions.

"We must study, work, evaluate what is best in the long run, and then pause to think it through," Mrs. Cannon said. "Then the Lord will let you know what to do through the power of the Holy Ghost."

Mrs. Cannon said a "mighty change" begins to take place when the Holy Ghost changes unbelief to belief.

"The mighty change is not just believing," she said, "but it is knowing and being what we ought to be as children of God."

Egypt accepts American invitation to peace talks

Egypt accepted an American invitation Thursday to take part in ministerial-level peace talks aimed at breaking the deadlock with Israel. Israel is expected to agree to attend the talks, which probably will be at Camp David, Md., later this month.

The likely participants are Egyptian Foreign Minister Mustafa Khalil, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat accepted the invitation delivered in Cairo by American Ambassador Hermann Eilts. The Israeli Cabinet met to consider the invitation, but put off a decision until its regular meeting Sunday. Israeli officials said Dayan almost certainly would attend the talks. Eilts said the date and place of the meeting will not be disclosed until Israel announces whether it will attend.

The negotiations have been stalled since November. Shuttle diplomacy by roving Ambassador Alfred Atherton last month failed to get them going again.

Each side has dug in its heels on what the treaty would mean to prior Egyptian defense pacts with Arab nations and whether the treaty should be linked to progess toward Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Egypt says the treaty must not bar it from honoring previous commitments and favors linking the treaty to Palestinian autonomy.

Eilts told reporters Thursday he could not predict whether a ministeral meeting at Camp David could lead to another summit of the type held by President Carter, Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin there last fall.

Indian student demonstrates sign language in last year's talent show put on during Indian Week. This year's show will be Tuesday from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Varsity Theater.

Indian Week planned

Approximately 300 high school Indian students from Canada to Arizona, and from as far east as Iowa will be special guests Sunday through Thursday during BYU's annual Indian Week.

Notable personalities on campus in conjunction with the activities include Elders George P. Lee and Boyd K. Packer, general authorities in the LDS church; Miss Indian America Susan Marie Arkeketa; and Joseph Running Fox.

The Lamanite Generation will perform, and paintings by Dr. James A. Jensen will be displayed. The annual Miss Indian BYU pageant will also be featured.

Chairman Dori Crouch, a senior in interior design from Ephrata, Wash., said Indians and non-Indians are invited to participate in the variety of activities planned for the week. "Visions of the Future" is the theme for the week, which is co-sponsored by the Indian Education Department and the Tribe of Many Feathers under President Bob Scabby.

The Miss Indian BYU Pageant will include daily contests in everything from cooking to traditional Indian talent. Doreen Meyers, current Miss Indian BYU and director of the pageant, will crown the new winner at the ban-

Iranian leader holds ground

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Hundreds of soldiers marched along with a million other Iranians in Tehran Thursday in a show of support for an anti-shah revolutionary government. But Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar held his ground, vowing he will not surrender power to a "mob."

The leader of the "transitional government" trying to oust Bakhtiar was quoted as saying Washington has "indirectly" expressed a desire to establish good relations with a future revolutionary regime.

Marches here and in other Iranian cities were generally peaceful, but new political violence flared in two provincial towns.

Maoist guards executed

HONG KONG (AP) — Four of the Red Guards who helped enforce Maoist ideological purity during China's 1966-69 Cultural Revolution were executed in Peking after being convicted of raping, torturing and killing their victims, Radio Peking reported.

A transcript of the Feb. 1 broadcast, received in Hong Kong Thursday, said the Jan. 16 trial was witnessed by 37,000 persons.

Tax cuts could help economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal said Thursday the Carter administration intends to rely in the future on income-tax cuts, rather than higher spending, to stimulate the economy.

BLUMENTHAL

Although it would be dangerous to reduce taxes in 1980, he told the Senate Budget Committee, the economy may require a tax cut in 1981. Blumenthal conceded the necessity of such a reduction would further delay President Carter's goal of balancing the budget.

Committee approves Woodcock

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 12-1 Thursday for confirmation of Leonard Woodcock as the first U.S. ambassador to China since 1949.

WOODCOCK

Despite the vote, committee members said Woodcock's nomination will become entangled in a Senate floor battle over the future security of Taiwan.

The sole vote against appointment of the former United Auto Workers union president was cast by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a vocal opponent of President Carter's new China policy.

Utah professor named as judge

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — University of Utah assistant professor and lawyer Ralph R. Mabey was named U.S. bankruptcy judge for Utah Thursday, succeeding U.S. District Judge Bruce S. Jenkins.

Jenkins and U.S. District Judge Aldon Anderson made the appointment after several months of interviewing prospective judges for the post. Mabey said his may be one of the last appointments to a federal judgeship by members of the judiciary. By 1984, when his term expires, appointments will be made by the president and approved by the Senate.

Mabey, of Bountiful, will be sworn in at noon today in Anderson's courtroom in the Salt Lake Federal Courthouse.

quet and coronation at 6 p.m. Thursday in the ELWC center ballroom.

Featured speaker at the banquet will be Elder Lee, a member of the LDS Church's First Quorum of the Seventy and the first Indian to receive a doctoral degree from BYU. Other special guests will be Elder Packer of the Council of the Twelve and BYU President Dallin H. Oaks. A formal dance will follow the banquet and coronation.

Elder Lee will also speak at Tuesday's Devotional Assembly at 10 a.m. in the Marriot Center.

"The high school students coming to campus for Indian Week are mostly LDS Seminary students," Mrs. Crouch said. "Some special sessions will be conducted for them on BYU admissions, careers and college life." Students will come from Arizona, Oklahoma, New Mexico, South Dakota, Montana, Iowa, and Alberta, Canada.

Club booths and arts and crafts displays will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday in the ELWC stepdown lounge. During the same days and times, a special art exhibit will hang in the ELWC Secured Gallery. Featured will be the paintings of Indians and Eskimos by Dr. Jensen, noted artist and BYU paleontologist.

"One of the highlights Monday will be the traditional singing and dancing by BYU students in a mini pow-wow from noon to 1 p.m. on the east quad of the ELWC," Mrs. Crouch said. "It's exciting to see that today's youth are continuing to show interest in the culture and traditions of the past and still live in a modern world."

The Miss Indian BYU talent show will be conducted 1 to 3 p.m. Tuesday in the Varsity Theater. That night from 7 to 9 the Lamanite Generation will perform in the Smith Fieldhouse. The public is invited to the performance, which is free, and there are no reserved seats. The troupe is under the direction of Janie Thompson, founder and creative director.

Special guest speaker Wednesday will be Miss Indian America XXV, Susan Marie Arkeketa. She will speak at 10 a.m. in the Varsity Theater. An Otoe-Missouri-Creek Indian, she is a senior in journalism at the University of Oklahoma and has spent this year traveling throughout the United States speaking to Indians and non-Indians.

Charges dropped

Cullimore satisfied

By D. SCOTT SMITH
Universe Staff Writer

As a result of an out-of-court settlement, Kirk Cullimore, former ASBYU Attorney General, dropped charges against the ASBYU Executive Council over the supposedly "unethical" manner in which the council removed him.

"The settlement," said ASBYU President Perry Bratt, "was simply an agreement by Cullimore to drop his charges if the Executive Council would pass a bylaw outlining specific procedures of removal."

In the Council's meeting Thursday, the bylaw, jointly written by Cullimore and the Executive Council's legal advisers, was unanimously ratified.

"Personally, I am satisfied," Cullimore said, "that the Executive Council realized there was a problem with the removal process and took measures to prevent problems in the future."

Cullimore said he felt the Council was justified in removing him "just by the mere fact that they could not work with me." Cullimore stated further, "I feel it is in the Executive Council's best interest to remove any person who they have to work with but feel they can't work with."

He said the passing of the bylaw made all of the problems worthwhile.

Bratt said, "We still feel our decision was right, but because of the confusion that came, we are totally in support of the bylaw that was ratified."

"It has been helpful for the courts and the council," Bratt said. "Kirk and I have had conversations since then, and both of us have desires for a relationship of friendship in the future."

Bratt said last week the removal was handled in a way "to protect Cullimore's name," and not in reaction to a personal dislike for Cullimore.

Bratt said he will recommend Suzanne Van Leishout, a senior in social work and CDFR from Jerome, Idaho, for ratification as the new Attorney General. Miss Van Leishout is currently acting on a temporary appointment until the council votes officially on her appointment.

Council decides ousting process for appointees

By D. PATRICK DENNY
Universe Staff Writer

A bylaw establishing procedure to remove ASBYU appointed officers was passed unanimously in Thursday's Executive Council meeting.

The amendment, "Executive Council Bylaw 12-6," comes in the wake of the recent ousting of former ASBYU Attorney General Kirk Cullimore.

Fair discipline

According to ASBYU President Perry Bratt, the bylaw will provide a means for the council to "review and improve the quality of service of appointed officers of the ASBYU and to fairly discipline and remove those who do not adequately perform their duties."

The bylaw calls for a two-thirds majority vote of the council to remove any appointed officer except an ASBYU Supreme Court Justice, which will require a three-quarters vote.

"Appointed officials," as defined by the bylaw, include members of the Supreme Court and Common Court system, the attorney general, student defenders, election committee members, the five permanent members of the Organizations Review Board (ORB) and others. Non-voting members of the Executive Council, such as the Ombudsman, are not included.

The bylaw also stipulates that each appointed officer shall meet individually at least every two months with either the ASBYU president or executive vice president to discuss his or her performance in office.

Student defender

In other council actions, Barbara Sue Lawlor, a junior in political science from Orem, was approved unanimously as a student defender. Miss Lawlor resigned her position as elections committee co-chairman to take the new job.

ASBYU President Perry Bratt, said since Miss Lawlor will be "the only member in the student defender's office with elections committee experience," she will be an aid for student candidates who may have days in court with campaign violations.

Speakers admonish LDS women to develop spiritual characteristics

By PAMELA MARTIN
Universe Staff Writer

As a child of God, each person is unique, said the hursday afternoon speakers at the Fourth BYU omen's Conference.

Parley Newman, professor of educational psyology at BYU, and Jan Bassist, former counselor in e regional Young Special Interests presidency, oke on "Women and the Priesthood."

Directing his remarks to the young men, Newman id, "There are priesthood bearers who have atudes and feelings demeaning to women." He said me priesthood bearers think of women as "ornaents, objects and playthings."

Some are strongly misdirected in what they look r in a woman he added. As examples, he cited one dow who wanted only a "beautiful and glamorous" fe. "That's just what he got," Newman said. owever, she was also vain, selfish, and very imature." They were divorced within a year.

Newman recalled another young man who was luctant to marry a certain girl because "she wasn't good-looking as he was handsome." But some ualities outweigh others in importance, he said, uoting Proverbs 31 on the virtues of an excellent oman.

Equality in marriage

Speaking on marriage, Newman said, "Men and women stand in absolute equality." However, man is considered the head of the home because he is the protector and provider. "And a happy wife is a requirement for exaltation," he added.

Mrs. Bassist said three things are necessary for women to attain their full potential: spiritual rebirth, marriage and a uniting of the kingdom of God.

Spiritual rebirth, she says, brings the power to change, and those who have been reborn have "the ability to not only seek truth more clearly but to implement it."

Heavenly gifts

Through this transition, she continued, we receive new spiritual abilities and attributes. "It is our right and responsibility to cultivate these heavenly gifts," she said.

Speaking of marriage as a "delightful mystery," Mrs. Bassist said righteous marriage requires a righteous husband's leadership. Misunderstandings occur when there is "a lack of wisdom — the husband's, and a lack of obedience — the wife's."

She said when those who have met or are trying to meet the first two criteria are gathered together, then there is the kingdom of God, because "people are joined in a union of love and spirit."

Panel discusses career choices

By SUSANNE MEILSOE
Universe Staff Writer

"Life is what you make it," said speakers Thursday as they discussed "Why a Career" in the Fourth Annual Women's Conference.

Carol Lynn Pearson, author of several books and plays, discussed having a career without having a job. "It doesn't matter what field you choose, but become good in whatever you are doing, and most important, love what you are doing," she said. "Fame or fortune should not be our goal, but if it's there, take it." Mrs. Pearson said the greater meaning a career has, the greater the meaning in the woman's life who holds it.

Robert F. Bohn, assistant professor of Family Resource Management, said, "We live in a world made of a lot of different people with many needs. The question is if we are able to live up to our needs. A woman has to plan out what kind of strategy she wants to have in order to face the reality of life," Bohn said.

Planning a career does not always mean concentrating on money, said Fern Braithwaite, director of Volunteer Services at Utah Valley Hospital. Mrs. Braithwaite talked about volunteer work and the fullfillment it can be in a woman's life.

Jean Jenkins, assistant professor of speech at BYU, said a woman with a family has to have faith in what she's doing when taking a job outside the home. "In this generation of time, we have time to decide what we want to do," she said.

You're wasting your time reading this newspaper.

Not because it's not worth reading.

You're wasting your time because you could be reading it three to ten times faster than you are right now.

That's right — three to ten times faster. With better concentration, understanding, and recall.

The problem is, most of us haven't learned anything new about reading since we were 10 years old. So we're still stumbling along at a fraction of our real capacity. In fact, most people read so slowly that their brain actually gets bored and distracted between words (no wonder you have trouble concentrating when you read!)

The new Evelyn Wood RD2 reading program.

Over 20 years ago, Evelyn Wood's research with natural speed readers discovered reading techniques that could be learned and used by virtually anyone. Since that pioneering work, over a million people — from students to presidents — have put the Evelyn Wood method to work for them.

RD2 is Evelyn Wood's latest, updated reading improvement system — designed to be more effective and flexible than ever. With it, you should easily be able to cut your reading and study time by at least two thirds. That means if you're now studying 20 hours a week, you'll save roughly 400 hours — or almost 17 full 24 hour days — in this school year alone!

Spend an hour and check us out.

We know you may have trouble believing what you've just read. That's why our people are on campus now giving free 1 hour demonstrations of RD2. If you can spare an hour, we'll answer any questions you may have about RD2, and prove that you can unlearn your bad reading habits and start saving two thirds of your study time. We'll even demonstrate some new reading techniques designed to increase your speed immediately, with good comprehension.

This short demonstration could start you on your way to better grades, more free time, and a whole new outlook on studying.

It only takes an hour, and it's free. Don't miss it.

Attend a free 1-hour RD2 demonstration this week:

Boarding house widow still on trial

The widow of a Genola man who died recently must still face prosecution by the Utah County attorney's office for five counts of felony.

Daniel and Edan Murdock were charged with felony for exploiting adults after county health officials and sheriff's deputies raided the couple's boarding house for elderly persons last August.

"Nothing's changed in regard to Mrs. Murdock," Michael Esplin, deputy district attorney told the Associated Press. "We plan to go ahead with the trial."

Esplin said Murdock died recently from a sudden illness.

"The law has to be enforced because of the potential problems there and to deter others from engaging in similar operations," Esplin said.

County health officials said the housing units, formerly chicken coops converted for use by migrant laborers, were "old, dilapidated and deteriorated shacks." Seven allegedly retarded men and women, most of them elderly, and one elderly blind man lived in the structures, which officials said violated health and safety codes.

Bathing and toilet facilities consisted of one dilapidated shower and an old outhouse, Dr. Arley Flinders, director of the City-County Health Department, said.

According to Guy Burningham, $200 a month for rent was being collected by the Murdocks from each boarder.

Mrs. Murdock contended the tenants were allowed to live on the farm rent-free in return for help in remodeling the housing units. She said they could then use their Social Security money for food and personal items.

Cagers hope for twin road wins

By DAVE HEYLEN
Universe Sports Editor

Riding on the crest of an 88-80 win over San Diego State Saturday, the BYU Cougars open the second half of conference play on the road against New Mexico and Texas-El Paso this weekend.

In what could be the crucial road trip of the year, the Cougars face New Mexico Friday and UTEP Saturday. According to Frank Arnold, the championship of the WAC may be at stake. The Cougar mentor predicted following the SDSU game that BYU will win the WAC if they sweep the two games.

Currently the Cougars are 5-1 in WAC play and Saturday's conference game against the Miners doesn't pose a deep threat to Arnold. But the New Mexico game may prove to be different.

4-game streak

New Mexico is on a crest of its own, as the Norm Ellenberger-coached Lobos have won four of their last five games and have pushed their season record to 12-8. In their first meeting of the year, BYU handily defeated the Lobos in the Marriott Center. In a brilliantly executed game by the Cougars, BYU dealt New Mexico its second consecutive conference loss of the season, 100-83. Since then New Mexico has won four of five games.

Although the Lobos are two games behind the league-leading Utes and Cougars, at 3-3, a sweep this week would thrust New Mexico into the title picture.

Ellenberger's crew is paced by 6-8 forward Larry Belin, who is leading the WAC in scoring. The Detroit, Mich., native is averaging 23 points per game and is third in field goal percentages, hitting on 59 percent of his shots. In overall play, Belin is third in scoring.

"Judging from what I've been able to see," Arnold said, "New Mexico is playing pretty good basketball."

Going into this week's action the Lobos are leading the league in scoring, averaging 90.2 points per game. Two points behind them are the Cougars, at 88.6. In conference play, though, the Cougars lead the league in scoring, followed by Utah and New Mexico.

For BYU to win in the "Pit," the Cougars will need to cut off Belin, who clipped off 25 points in their first meeting. The junior forward also leads his team in rebounds with nine.

The Cougars will be paced by center Alan Taylor, who earned WAC Player of the Week honors for his performance against SDSU. The 6-10 junior is leading the WAC in rebounding, averaging 10.4 rebounds per game.

Along with Taylor, BYU will need the services of Danny Ainge, who was held to only 12 points against the Aztecs. Against UNM earlier this season, Ainge hit on 9 of 15 shots from the field and added nine points from the free throw line to take scoring honors for the game with 27.

Rounding out the probable starters will be guard Scott Runia, who is 20-for-22 from the free throw line, Devin Durrant and Fred Roberts. BYU's starting five is averaging a combined total of 72 points a game.

Texas-El Paso

With BYU playing New Mexico Friday and Texas-El Paso meeting Utah the same evening, Saturday night's confrontation between the Cougars and Miners should be a battle of the fittest.

One month ago in Provo, the Cougars held off a Miner scare early in the second half and exploded to an 80-56 win to open the conference season. UTEP turned in one of its poorest performances of the year, hitting only 28 percent of its shots from the field while the Cougars clipped off 61 percent of theirs.

For the hometown fans, it was their first look at the Cougars' 1-3-1 defense, which has characterized the Cougar defensive play since then. BYU held the Miners to 10 points in the second period of the first half and allowed only three points in the last four minutes of the game.

Currently the Miners are 10-9 overall and 2-4 in the WAC. UTEP's two wins are over Wyoming and San Diego State.

Although known for their ability to create an upset, the Miners pose no major threat to the Cougars.

Friday's game against New Mexico will be aired on KBYU at 7:30 p.m.

Y women to compete in Idaho

BYU's women's track and field team will compete in the second Idaho State Invitational meet Saturday.

The Cougars took second place in the meet last year, losing to the University of Washington by only two points, 102-100.

BYU coach Nena Rey Hawkes said her team is looking forward to competing with Washington because the two teams will battle in a dual meet in April.

women face Utah
n classic showdown

By CHUCK GATES
Universe Sports Writer

v-down*n*: the final settlement of a ested issue or the test of strength which it is settled

Webster were still around today he nt consider expanding his defini- to include this Saturday's BYU- n women's basketball contest.

's been over a month since the Utes ed BYU, 77-76, in January's Cop- Classic at Ogden. Since that time, ch Courtney Leishman's Cougars have been playing their games one at a time, knowing that their awaited showdown rematch with the Utes would be only a matter of time.

The time has arrived and when BYU invades Ute land over the weekend, the Cougars will find themselves in what Leishman terms a "must win" situation. They must win if they hope to repeat as Region Seven conference champions this season.

Leishman had hoped the first half of the league schedule would have been kinder to his young Cougars and that Saturday's Utah clash would have pitted two conference unbeatens in a battle for the league title.

Instead, Saturday will be a different showdown of sorts, pitting the still unbeaten Utes (6-0) against BYU players (4-2) who are battling for their conference lives.

Commenting on the situation, Leishman quipped, "Let's just say that if we lost we'd be farther behind them then we'd like to be.

"They have much more experience but I think we've matured enough to play with them. One of the characteristics of a young team is their improvement as the season goes on.

"We're ready to play basketball. We're getting better every game," Leishman added.

According to Leishman, the Utes are a good fundamental team with some good shooters, attested to by the fact that three of the Utah players are listed among the top ten for conference field goal percentage. Yet only one player, Lori Parrish (18.3), is ranked among the the conference scoring leaders.

Cougar notes

Leishman is expected to continue using his basic starting lineup of the past few weeks. Tina Gunn, Jeanette Weston, Jenny Cox, Cheryl Cady and Jackie Beene are scheduled to start.

Tina Gunn, resulting from her limited playing time last week, dropped to second place behind Weber State's Karen Miller in the battle for the league scoring crown. Gunn, who owns a 26.8 conference average trails Miller's 32.4 average.

Saturday's game will be played at 7:30 p.m. in the East Gym 101 of the University of Utah campus.

n Lobo land

ne BYU wrestllng team will at- pt to improve its tournament rd this weekend as it travels to Mexico for the 11th Annual Lobo tational. The Cougars will compete many prominent western teams.

the three tournaments the gars entered this year, they gar- d two third places, at the Beehive tational and the MIWA Tourna- t, and a fifth place at the Arizona tational. BYU picked up the Lobo nament title in 1977, but will be l pressed to do it again as they are us the services of second-ranked l Hansen at 167 pounds.

ansen is sidelined with a fractured w, but before the injury he was to eclipse former Utah State grap- Bob Erickson as the winningest tler in Utah state history. Han- s overall record is 119-12-1, sur- ing Erickson's 117-13-3.

he Cougars do have other strengths ompensate for Hansen's absence, cially in the 134-pound and 158- nd weight classes. Nationally third ked Ed Maisey goes into tourna- t action with a 22-1 season record, Donnie Owen will attempt to im- e his 25-3 record. Owen's perfor- ce on last week's Oregon road trip merit his getting a national rank- as he defeated a fifth ranked tler.

ther Cougars going into the tourna- t with winning records include l Anderson, 19-5; and Craig Prete, 0-2.

Y swimmers seek revenge against Utah

BYU's swim team will seek revenge in their meet with Utah Saturday, after losing to the Utes in the Colorado Invitational last week.

According to BYU Coach Tim Powers, the loss has served as a stimulus for his team. "We know we are capable of beating Utah," said Powers. "We felt somewhat frustrated after last week's loss and definitely want to beat them. We will have no trouble getting up for this meet. We don't feel like we lost to Utah last week."

Powers was referring to the fact that BYU's 400-medley relay team was disqualified at the CU Invitational. In that race, BYU's "A" team was in first place and actually set a new school record (3:32.0), but the team was disqualified because of an early takeoff and as a result the Cougars lost the contest to Utah.

This Saturday's meet serves as a tune-up for the coming WAC championships, which will be held at Laramie, Wyo., March 1-3. Saturday's meet, scheduled for 3 p.m. in Provo, is the last team competition of the regular season for the Cougars.

BYU is looking good, with individual times improving every meet.

Top policeman in class pleads guilty to charges

A former Provo City policeman is scheduled for sentencing today after pleading guilty to a second degree felony charge.

Scott M. Winsor was charged with stealing two snowmobiles from an Orem residence. He was released from duty for misconduct shortly after, Provo Police Chief Swen Nielson said.

According to a friend, Winsor had one of the highest scores ever recorded for the Provo policeman's written test, and had attended West Point.

"He graduated No. 1 in the po academy," said Stephen Rice, 167 500 North, Provo. "He's a su achiever."

Winsor was arraigned before Fou District Court Judge David Sam Jan. 18.

His sentencing was continued u today to give the probation dep ment time to investigate the ma and make its recommendation.

Y coed hit by car; listed as serious

A BYU coed was seriously injured Wednesday night when she was struck by a car as she returned home from a class.

Terri Rae Stone, 21, Pocatello, Idaho, a sophomore majoring in physical education, is listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit of Utah Valley Hospital with a severe head concussion, fractured left arm and a separated left shoulder, hospital officials said.

According to Officer Greg Cooper of the Provo Police Department, the accident happened at the intersection of 700 North and 200 East in Provo at approximately 9:30 p.m.

Miss Stone, who resides at 195 E. 600 North, No. 34, was walking south on 200 East with a friend, Jo Ann Jensen, when the accident occurred.

Miss Jensen said that as they approached the intersection, Miss Stone looked to the west and saw some cars coming. "She must have thought she had enough time to make it," Miss Jensen said, "because she continued walking. She didn't see the car coming from the east which is the one that hit her."

The driver of the vehicle was Sharon L. Pearson, 24, 1020 E. 380 North, No. 128, Provo.

Gas station safe robbed of $1,000

Two men wearing ski masks and armed with knives held up a Provo service station late Wednesday night and fled with over $1,000 in cash.

Two men between the ages of 21 and 25 entered the University Fina Service Station, 1410 S. University Ave., as the attendant was cleaning up for the night, Provo Police Lieut. Bud Gilman said.

"One of the suspects pointed a large knife at the attendant," Gillman said, "at which time the attendant gave him the money from the safe which was already open."

Gillman said the attendant and another station employee were then placed in the back room and told not to leave for 10 minutes. As soon as the suspects left, the attendant ran across the street to call the police.

The case is currently under investigation by the Provo Police Department.

Lamanite troupe to dance

The Lamanite Generation, a multi-cultural troupe, will perform songs and dances of the Indians, Polynesians, and Latin Americans in a special performance Tuesday.

The show, which will be presented as a part of Indian Week, will begin at 7 p.m. in the Smith Fieldhouse. All Indian week participants, special guests and the general public are invited to attend without charge.

"Many new faces will be seen in this year's cast, bringing a fresh vitality, dedication and excitement to the show," according to Janie Thompson, founder and creative director of the group.

Traditional Indian numbers to be performed include the Creek Stomp, featuring Lamanite Generation president Clint McMaster; a Navajo gourd dance; a hoop dance using 22 hoops for each dancer; the Winnebago Buck and Doe Dance and a dance simulating two warriers attacking each other, the Spear and Shield.

NBC television star to speak

Joseph Running Fox, star of the three-hour NBC television special "Ishi, Last of His Tribe," will speak and show clips from the movie during Indian Week at BYU.

He will speak at 9 a.m., Feb. 15, in the Varsity Theater, ELWC.

The star will share some of the time with Arliene Nofchissey Williams of Provo, who portrayed Ishi's mother in the movie.

Arliene, a Navajo and well-known composer of Indian songs, is a BYU alumna and a recording artist. She was nominated for a Grammy Award last year for the album, recorded with Chief Dan George. It is entitled "The Proud Earth."

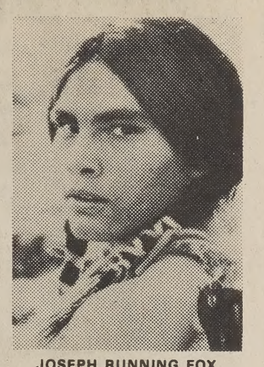
A little more than a year ago, Joseph was a pre-med student at BYU and was known on campus as Joseph Garcia. He was a member of the Lamanite Generation and later married his dancing partner, Roxanne McClarren. Joseph is a Santa Domingo Pueblo Indian from Albuquerque and served a Mexico Hermosillo mission for the LDS Church.

Early last winter, film director Robert Miller Ellis visited BYU looking for a young man to play the part of Ishi as a teenager. The role was the longest and most difficult to portray in the movie. A younger and an older Ishi also had to be found — all with similar looks and voices.

Joseph, who didn't know anything about television except how to turn it on and off, was invited to Hollywood to audition for the part. He had never acted before, but put his own special feelings into reading the script. He was hired.

The whole crew then went to northern California for several weeks to film on location where the original Ishi once lived.

"Ishi" is the story of the last survivor of the Yahi tribe in northern



JOSEPH RUNNING FOX

California. The movie is based on a book by Theodora Kroeber. At the turn of the century, when Ishi was a boy of 10, the tribe was massacred. Only immediate family and a friend of Ishi survived. They retreated into the woods to live in seclusion.

The family members died one by one until Ishi was left alone. He finally became distraught and couldn't live alone any longer.

One rainy day he started running and was later found half-dead, shivering in a slaughterhouse outside Oroville, Calif.

An anthropologist from Berkeley, portrayed by Dennis Weaver in the movie, was contacted. He befriended Ishi and taught him English.

Choir to feature 'traditional beat'

By SUSANNE MEILSOE
Universe Staff Writer

Through the sounds of the steady beat of the drums, the light tones of the flute and the voices of 50 native performers, the BYU Intertribal Choir brings the audience into a totally different world.

Consisting of Indians representing more than 35 tribes, the choir presents a program of traditional Native American music, singing, dancing and storytelling.

John C. Rainer, choir director, said the choir was organized in 1974 by a group of students "dedicated to the idea that native American music has much to contribute to our nation because of its depth and power to communicate feelings and ideas in a unique and refreshing style."

The 5 p.m. Monday performance in the Main Ballroom, ELWC, will be structured like a family type evening and include a talk by Miss Indian American, Susan Aekeketa, Rainer said. The group has been years as part of Indian Week.

The main theme of the show is the family, Rainer said. "We do this because the essential element of Native Americans was centered around the family," he said. "We consider the family to be an eternal element, so in our show we look at the family in an eternal context."

The message of the show is brought to the audience through narrations. "Native Americans are spiritual people, and spirituality has always been of great concern to them," Rainer said. "That's why we try to communicate the idea that almost all native Americans are very concerned about the spiritual aspect of life."

Joseph Naranjo, choir president, said being a member of the choir is a special experience. "It's just like when a black listens to jazz, there is something inside of him that makes him want to dance and tap his feet," he said. "That's exactly the way I feel. Being involved in native American music makes me think of traditions like dancing, horseback riding and storytelling."

Mormon ideas alive in ABC's 'Galactica'

Editor's note: Recently the Daily Universe dispatched correspondent Steve Preston to interview TV producer Glen A. Larson. Larson, a member of the LDS Church, has produced many TV programs, among them "It Takes A Thief," "Quincy," "McCloud," and now, "Battlestar Galactica." The following is the second in a two-part series about Larson.

By STEVE PRESTON
Special Correspondent

Glen A. Larson, producer of ABC-TV's Battlestar Galactica, admits that producing television shows can be a very stressful business.

"This has been one of our most successful years, and yet one of the least satisfying to me," he said. "We are going through a state of turmoil at the networks these days. Personnel changes put those people under a lot of stress. Those people in turn then deal with us in sometimes erratic ways."

Larson does express great respect for the network presidents, men like Fred Silverman of NBC, with whom Larson claims to have had a good relationship at all times.

As an established producer, Larson takes his ideas and scripts for new series directly to the network or else works through Universal.

He offers this advice to those who have good ideas for new series, but lack influence: "When you are new, you need to try to deal with someone who has clout. You deal through a Universal, or some other big studio, because our studio has clout. At Universal you'll go to one of the program executives or to a producer like myself. I don't get involved with too many outside projects because we have so many of our own that we sometimes have trouble bringing them along. To start looking at ideas from other people can be counterproductive. But that is not to say we don't do it."

Since Larson is a successful producer, ideas are sometimes brought to him. An example is his latest effort, the movie Buck Rogers. Larson originally turned down Universal's request that he handle Buck Rogers. He later changed his mind and with Battlestar Galactica now has two entries in the race to control space.

Larson notes that television is very much a trends business. "Your ideas are as commercial as the network's appetite for certain types of programs. You can be the greatest salesman in the world, but if the networks don't want to do a western, you will have little luck no matter how good your western is."

Larson further warns that the time slot a new show is given is often as important as the inherent quality of the show and offers his own recently cancelled Sword of Justice as an example.

"Sword of Justice never got a chance," said Larson. "It had nothing leading into it. There was a void ahead of it, and a couple of top ten shows sitting across the channel on ABC. So no one ever bothers to change channels."

Unfortunately, notes Larson, he has little leverage to get better time slots for his shows.

"I can't tell Fred Silverman what to do with his network," said Larson. "If I could, I would have. Once in a while you lose and you feel it was an undeserved loss and Sword of Justice was one of them. It was too bad. Not that the show was flawless, but it was well received. A lot of people really liked the show, but it was just at the wrong place at the wrong time."

When asked which series he enjoyed producing, Larson responds: "The Switch pilot was a delight because it was a reunion with Bob Wagner. McCloud was an enjoyable experience through its entire run. Dennis Weaver is a wonderful man and we did some of the most spectacular things on television — going to New York City and galloping down Times Square with a stagecoach or hanging from a helicopter right across the Manhattan skyline. There were some really remarkable, splendid moments in that show, and at one point it was called the best produced of all the television shows.

"I enjoyed getting 'Quincy' started. Everyone had tried to do a pathology show, yet we found a way to do it with some humor. Jack Klugman brings a warmth and caring spirit to the show. He is real and unique and therefore you can make a lot of mistakes when you have someone that good in the show."

When queried further as to why he had not mentioned "Battlestar Galactica" as being one of his favorite shows, Larson remarked: "It takes so much of my time and concerns and raises so many anxieties. It is not the kind of show that you can go out on Hollywood Boulevard and shoot when you get stuck for an episode. Everything requires extra thought, extra time."

Larson once compared doing a space show with creating the first western — "you have to create the first western street, design a horse..."

Larson hints that Galactica is changing directions. There will be less emphasis on the Cylons chasing the humans each week across space and more emphasis on developing the characters in the show. Larson added that the Galactica may reach earth well before the series ends.

"Reaching earth will open up a whole new era for the show," he said.

Larson's LDS heritage is obvious in his work. Many Mormon concepts crop up in the show: the leaders of the 12 tribes are known as the Council of the Twelve and people aboard the Galactica marry for time and eternity. The Galactica crew are searching for peace and sanctuary on the planet "Kobol." And in a recent two-part episode Starbuck and Apollo meet a higher life form which most people would call "angels." One of these "angels," responding to Starbuck's question as to where they came from, paraphrases Lorenzo Snow's famed couplet by saying "As you now are, we once were; and as we are now, you may become." The "angel" further explains the principle of free-agency and tells wayward Starbuck that straight-arrow Apollo has the mission of fellowshipping him and helping find truth.

Despite the obvious Mormon influences, Larson, plays down the influences, possibly to avoid a "fanatic" image.

"We are all products of our environment and I think any writer calls on his own experience because how are you going to call on someone else's?" he said. "We are in the entertainment business - we are not a theological mission - but I do think it is healthy to include wholesome values in the show."

Larson's "wholesome values" include having the Galactica characters believe in God and in writing scripts which are based on the struggle between good and evil.

Larson admits that the basic concept of "Galactica" is Biblical. Indeed the story line is based on a lost 13th tribe which moved to a distant planet called earth. Now the surviving remnants of the other 12 tribes seek sanctuary from the Cylons.

The show also exhibits ancient Egyptian influences. Larson atributes this to the popular conception that ancient civilizations were descendants from distant space travelers.

There is generally only a two week period between the time a show is shot and the time it appears on television. Generally, each sequence of action is filmed several times, each time from a different angle. A team of eight film editors work to turn out the final product. Most TV shows require only two editors.

Special effects have been a key to "Galactica's" success. Originally, the special effects were handled by John Dykstra who did the special effects for Star Wars and is now at work for Paramount on the movie version of Star Trek. Several of Dykstra's talented apprentices now handle Galactica's special effects.

Larson's shows are so popular that his office processes 1,000-2,000 fan letters a week. Each letter receives a reply.

Battlestar Galactica, the brainchild of Glen A. Larson, employs several concepts peculiar to Mormonism; a basic conflict between good and evil, and the ideas of a "Council of the Twelve," lost tribes and a search for the planet "Kobol."

'Jordan' to play at Film Society

Mr. Jordan came to the screen long before heaven began its wait.

This weekend the Film Society, sponsored by the ASBYU Culture Office, presents the original "Heaven Can Wait," a Columbia Pictures film entitled "Here Comes Mr. Jordan."

In this story, Joe Pendleton, (played by Robert Montgomery), a light-heavyweight contender, rather than a football player, is killed in the crash of his plane. Mr. Jordan (Claude Rains), chief dispatcher of the "Heavenly Express" discovers that Joe has arrived 50 years too soon. Mr. Jordan returns him to earth, giving Joe the body of murdered millionaire Bruce Farnsworth. He helps Bette Logan (Evelyn Keyes), who is involved in the murder. When Farnsworth is again killed, Joe is given the body of Murdock, another challenger. Joe wins the championship, and Bette.

Showtimes are Thursday at 7:30 p.m., and Friday and Saturday at 6:30, 8:00, and 9:30 p.m. in 446 MARB.

Pianist Tocco to perform with BYU philharmonic

Internationally-famed pianist James Tocco will appear as guest soloist with the BYU Philharmonic Orchestra Saturday in the deJong Concert Hall.

Tocco and the 91-member orchestra, directed by Dr. Ralph G. Laycock, will perform Samuel Barber's "Piano Concerto, Op. 38." The remainder of the program will be announced the night of the performance.

Tocco is one of the few American pianists to win eight major international competitions, including first prize at the 1973 Munich International Music Competition. He has been in concert extensively in the United States, Europe, South America, the Middle East and Russia, including a "Command Gala Performance" for the Shah of Iran with the Tehran Philharmonic and Andre Kostelanetz.

The Detroit-born pianist has appeared with the Chicago Symphony, the Detroit Symphony, the National Symphony of Washington, D.C., the Bavarian State Orchestra in Munich, the Amsterdam Philharmonic and the Residentie Orkest in The Hague.

Tocco was the first pianist honored with an invitation from President and Mrs. Ford to play at a state dinner in the White House.

Tocco, now an artist-in-residence at Indiana University, made his New York debut in Trully Hall in 1972, and he now plays there regularly.

Laycock, himself an accomplished musician of all woodwinds, trumpet and string bass and a former Juilliard School of Music instructor, has conducted the Utah Symphony, Repertory Dance Theater orchestra for modern dance, and many BYU bands, orchestras, operas, musicals and oratorios.

The concert, part of the Lyceum Series sponsored by the music department, will begin at 8 p.m. Tickets for the performance are available at the HFAC music ticket office.

Food or property? Tax cuts debated

By LARRY WERNER
Universe Staff Writer

Utah Gov. Scott M. Matheson called upon legislators Thursday to remove the sales tax on food, but Republican leaders reaffirmed their position on property tax reductions.

Speaking to a group of several hundred senior citizens at the state capitol, Matheson said, "It's time to remove the four percent sales tax on food now."

Senior citizens arrived en masse at the capitol Thursday as part of Senior Citizens Day where they hoped to lobby for the removal of the sales tax on food and increased funding for senior citizens' programs.

"The majority party (in the legislature) is still philosophically opposed to the removal of the tax," Matheson said. "I am philosophically opposed to taxing a basic necessity of life."

The governor also urged the legislators to initiate property tax relief beginning with this year's returns. Ten million dollars for rebates is presently available from savings made on departmental and higher education cutbacks, he said.

However, Republican leaders, also speaking to the seniors, were firm in their commitment to property tax reductions instead of an elimination of the food sales tax.

Regarding food tax legislation, Speaker of the House James V. Hansen, R-Farmington, said, "Before you get caught up in the hysteria, look at the programs and ask which gives you the most savings. Compare the figure of a 40 percent cutback in your property taxes with food tax reductions."

Senate President Miles "Cap" Ferry, R-Corinne, said, "We feel that no one should be taxed out of his home."

In legislative action Thursday, the House passed a bill that will allow vacancies in municipal and county commissions and school boards to be filled by general elections rather than appointment. The Senate approved legislation which can require criminals to provide restitution to their victims as a condition of probation or parole. The bill also allows the state to charge a convicted felon for the cost of a lawyer and investigator if he received free legal counsel when he could have paid for it.

Alcohol education program favored over warning labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost two years after warning pregnant women that drinking increases the risk of birth defects, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said Thursday it will push a national education program before considering a requirement for warning labels on alcoholic beverages.

Even though the Food and Drug Administration and others have called for warning labels, Assistant Treasury Secretary Richard Davis said labels may be premature because the problem is not fully understood.

"Scientific evidence establishes clearly that the offspring of women who drink heavily during pregnancy could suffer mental and physical defects known as the fetal alcohol syndrome," Davis said.

But he added that scientists disagree on the effects of more moderate drinking. And Davis said no one has determined a safe level of drinking, if such a level exists.

The new education program will involve federal agencies, the alcohol industry and service groups concerned with birth defects, and will include public service announcements on television and radio, education efforts in schools, and distributing brochures.

Women's conference: a small step forward

The Annual Women's Conference this week is a commendable effort to help both women and men better understand the problems women face. The slate of speakers and workshop participants at the conference is impressive, and it is relieving that workshops at BYU are beginning to grapple with topics such as divorce, single life, and childless marriages in a family-oriented church.

The conference offers participants a chance to understand, and in some cases prepare for, difficult situations which are becoming more evident in and outside the church.

Many women have taken strong positions on subjects associated with the women's movement and LDS women need to be able to intelligently choose their position. "The women's movement is not going to go quietly away," said Ida Smith, director of the newly formed LDS Women's Research Institute. "It's important to keep abreast of it."

Hopefully, this women's conference will be a step in that direction. The conference refreshingly gives women far more credit than the "Fascinating Womanhood" approach found in too many Mormon circles.

Though ASBYU's effort to help women is a good start, there is yet much to be done. There's something unfortunate about casting a negative light — a "you unfortunate soul" attitude — on the position of unmarried LDS women.

Future women's conferences need to spend more time helping women not only cope with the curves life throws, but also decisively and optimistically plan their futures. For example, practical workshops could be held on the law — getting credit, holding community property, changing names legally, and getting custody of children.

Thursday's speech by Parley Newman, professor of educational psychology, who directed many of his remarks to young men was also a good beginning. Somewhere along the line, there need to be discussions that don't tiptoe around the issue of where men fit into all of this. Everyone needs to realize that it's not just women's attitudes and lives that are being changed by the women's movement. LDS men need to be informed on it, too.

The direction of past women's conferences has swung back and forth between liberal and conservative views. This conference seems to be the first one which charts the practical course of helping women of all areas better their lives. That's at least an impressive beginning.

Student criticism needed, but praise also worthwhile

When students feel their teachers haven't done an adequate job, they can suggest means of improvement through the teacher evaluation forms.

But what if a teacher does more than an "adequate" job? What if he (or she) is full of enthusiasm and knowledge and is able to spark an interest for the subject matter in students? What if he is well-prepared scholastically and can present material in an organized and effective way?

Students who wish to recognize the university instructor who "promotes academic excellence" can nominate him for the Karl G. Maeser Distinguished Teaching Award.

Five awards are made each year, with winners receiving a $1,000 unrestricted stipend.

Alumni, faculty and students may make nominations. Students especially should take the time to fill out a form because they are the one's who are most affected by outstanding teachers.

Too often, more time is spent criticizing professors for their imperfections than acknowledging them for their successes. Students who have had teachers who have proven to be "distinguished" can, and should, show their appreciation by making the nomination.

Forms and information on eligibility are available at the Alumni House, ASBYU Academics Office, the Academics Vice President's office and the the information desk, ELWC. The deadline is March 2.

The best of BYU's professors deserve the recognition and it's up to the students, who can most easily identify the outstanding faculty members, to help give that recognition.

Can't stop dancin'

Legislators contract Saturday night fever

Legislators are so adept at dancing, they should be instructors at Arthur Murray's. One problem: while they dance, we pay the piper.

Fiscal conservatives have suddenly found themselves waltzing with literally hundreds of legislators. All have come to the aid of the overburdened middle-class taxpayer. It makes one wonder where they've been hiding all these years.

Actually the "cut taxes boogie" is just one of the many dances learned by legislators and congressmen in the past few years. Unfortunately, most of their dances cost taxpayers millions.

California's legislature has been doing the "shuffle" since the adoption of Proposition 13. Legislators threatened mass layoffs of public employees and drastic cutbacks of services should 13 pass. These tactics didn't work; the measure passed by a landslide. The legislators, chewing sour grapes, began the task of teaching the state's misguided voters a lesson. You just don't give the legislature less than it wants.

In the aftermath, one cartoon showed a grossly overfed and well-dressed bureaucrat, holding up Proposition 13 and saying to a tattered group of soldiers, representing public employees and programs, "Looks like your meal rations will need to be cut."

That's exactly what happened. Legislators began a vicious "we'll show them" campaign. Their threats sent tremors up and down the San Andreas Fault.

Almost entirely overlooked were wasteful pet programs and vast inefficiency in many parts of the state government, the tax relief the people of California had really sought.

The "hustle" is a popular dance in Illinois these days. Voting pay raises for themselves is common fare for legislators, and it is usually done quietly and without much debate. Two separate legislative bodies in Illinois rushed through 25-30 percent pay hikes, avoiding, as usual, public airing of the matter. This normally wouldn't seem out of the ordinary, but President Carter had just finished pleading with the nation to hold pay raises to seven percent, as part of his anti-inflation program. When confronted by an angry administration, Illinois' response was to thumb their noses at the President. A slightly modified, but still excessive pay raise stood.

It's ironic that legislators will spend weeks haggling over minor language modifications in a bill earmarking funds for public use and benefit, yet "hustle" through millions of dollars headed for their own pockets?

The U.S. Senate is doing an exotic dance called the "Taj Mahal." That's what some people are calling the new Senate office building now under construction. Before jumping to the obvious conclusion, consider a few facts. Then jump.

The Senate already has two office buildings, totalling 1.3 million square feet of floor space. Under normal conditions, this would be more than adequate. But in the past 25 years, while Senators have increased by four (96 to 100), staff has increased by 50 percent. Thus, the Senate has been forced to rent hotels, apartments and other buildings to house many of the 6,500 employees. The solution? Reappraise the positions and justify their existance? Modify existing facilities to accommodate the few that might not now fit in? No! Their answer was to build a new $122 million, 1.1 million square foot office building.

When austerity is the new watchword in Washington, on the surface at least, can it be possible to justify $1.5 million in office paneling, $3 million in marble facing, a $350,000 gymnasium (in addition to the two Senators already have), and a $600,000 rooftop restaurant (to add to the 2.5 restaurant seats per Senator already available)? The House finally woke up last year and convincingly voted down additonal funding for the complex. You see, elections were upcoming.

Senators, and their staffs, were furious. For many years, by gentlemen's agreement, an appropriation for anything from staff expansion to universal gyms was passed without blinking. The Senate threatened to retaliate by voting down pet House measures.

Now, the elections are over, tempers have cooled, and the Senate is once again dancing for their new "Taj Mahal." A new bill awaits the House, asking for the funding to be restored. Most Washington observers feel that with pressure of elections not threatening, the measure will pass. The Senate "Taj Mahal", which one supporting source called a "monument to democracy," will probably be built as planned.

Hey, these are our dollars they're fooling around with! How much longer will we believe the endless tirade of needing to cut back essential social programs if we want lower taxes? There is a lot of fat to be cut before getting there, but it won't be done until people care a lot more than they do now.

Refrigerators: male, female or chauvinist

I used to compare chauvinism [illegible] slavery, wife abuse and misery. I v[illegible] wrong.

Now I compare chauvinism [illegible] refrigerators.

A few weeks ago, my husband an[illegible] decided to make a large investme[illegible] Not in something fun or flashy but[illegible] something necessary and boring. [illegible] refrigerator.

As poor students with mea[illegible] means, we were determined to get [illegible] most for our small amount of mon[illegible] and we set out to learn all we co[illegible] about rotary motors, poured insulat[illegible] and guarantees.

We spent a few evenings read[illegible] "Consumer Reports," buyer's gui[illegible] and all the information we co[illegible] gather on size, price, reliability [illegible] even color.

Armed with pages of notes and a [illegible] of appliance stores, we were ready[illegible] buy a refrigerator.

We walked in the door and head[illegible] for the wall lined with refrigerators. [illegible] of a sudden, a bright-eyed salesm[illegible] displaying a wide, cheshire-cat g[illegible] popped into the aisle in front of us[illegible]

After the initial "Hi folks! Just w[illegible] can I do for you today?" we made[illegible] across the room and started inspect[illegible] the refrigerators.

"What kind of motor does t[illegible] have?" I asked while opening the do[illegible]

The man turned to my husba[illegible] "Well sir, I'll explain these motors a[illegible] their different functions and I'm s[illegible] you'll be pleased with this model.'

He rambled on and I tried ag[illegible] "What's the guarantee like?"

I don't think he heard me. [illegible] bustled over and pulled t[illegible] refrigerator away from the wall. "[illegible] little lady, look how easy it will be[illegible] clean around this refrigerator! [illegible] ahead! Push it back to the wall!"

I didn't want to disappoint the m[illegible] so I pushed the refrigerator back to [illegible] wall and tried again. "What type of [illegible] sulation does it have?"

He sputtered something to me ab[illegible] plenty of space for eggs.

I decided it was time to [illegible] somewhere else, and on the way [illegible] the door the salesman caught my a[illegible] and reminded me of the temperatu[illegible] controlled butter tray.

Outside, my husband and I [illegible] cussed the "refrigerator conversati[illegible] and decided that salesman had to [illegible] an exception, the rest surely would[illegible] be the same. We had a good laugh [illegible] figured the next stop would be [illegible] ferent.

It wasn't. Neither were the next f[illegible] I asked about motors and metals a[illegible] reliability. I learned about preserv[illegible] angel food cake in the special hyc[illegible] drawer.

I hate to say it, but refrigera[illegible] salesmen are chauvinists. And I s[illegible] think of them when I reach for the n[illegible] carton. It will take a while to [illegible] associate the poor machine from th[illegible] little grinning men in ties.

I wonder what will happen when[illegible] buy a washing machine? I think [illegible] stay home.

Letters to the Editor

Heartbreak hotel

Editor:

Now at least one of the male population at BYU knows how it feels when not asked to a formal dance. Referring to Glade Ross' letter.

He complains about spending money on dates etc., what about the girls who cook dinner, wash clothers, make cookies and not to mention staying up all hours of the night talking to a guy, who does not know when it is time to leave?

Believe me, Mr. Ross, I have sat home many a night wondering when I'll get asked to a dance or asked out. At least you can do the asking 99 percent of the time.

Also, what about the girls that spend hours doing their hair, putting on make-up and wearing flattering clothes just so the men will look at them and ask them out? Clothes and make-up don't come cheap.

In conclusion, I have to hand it to the girls, at least they are willing to forgive and hope to be asked to the next dance; and Mr. Ross, I hope that you will be as forgiving.

Hiding behind the rules

Editor:

I would like to reveal an apparently little known truth to BYU departmental office and bookstore staff:

The university is here for students. University departmental rules exist to help students, not to hurt them. In those instances where they do hurt, they can and should be broken.

Yes, I am LDS and have a testimony. But one of few who understand that departmental rules are not in a league with the eternal laws of God. I am a BYU employee and I know how easy it is to abdicate personal responsibility and hide behind department rules, but I make a concious effort to be sensitive and detect those situations where exceptions should be made, rules aside. The Law of Moses went out 2,000 years ago.

Art damage bad example

Editor:

It was sad and disheartening to read the account of how the painting "Pocahantas Saving John Smith" was damaged Tuesday in the HFAC. To think how someone would be so careless is beyond my understanding.

I frequently view all of the displayed paintings and this one was particularly special. We are so lucky to attend this fine institution. We are looked up to for the examples we set, but it is incidents such as this one that lessen our stride toward perfection. Being a first semester transfer student I appreciate the many exhibits and activities available free to the public.

At my previous school beautiful works of art would never be displayed as this one was. Its destruction would only be expected. I like to think that we students here at BYU are above that carelessness. Whether it was done purposely or by accident does not matter. The painting will never be the same. Let us learn from this misfortune so it will never repeat itself.

No barrier to woman pres.

Editor:

I would really like to know what motivated Gina Focosi to write her editorial on women running for ASBYU president. Is she trying to tell us that she's going to run for office, and that we'd all better vote for her because she's female, and in her opinion, qualified? Did she ever stop to think that maybe the capable and potential girl presidents have no desire or time to be ASBYU president? As for fearing "ridicule" and "accusations" from her male and female peers, I doubt many students would want a president who is so insecure that she lets comments from a few inconsiderate slobs bother her. Such slobs would be in the minority, I'm sure. Also, who says the idea of a female president seems so far off? It sounds as if Gina knows of a female candidate for the upcoming ASBYU elections. If not, why fight a war that hasn't started yet and may not exist at all?

Keep out of Iran

Editor:

Regardless of how the internal situation in Iran develops, or how long it takes for Iran to return to "stability," the U.S. intervention — whether in arms sales, military personnel or advisors — is unwarranted and should be withdrawn.

Sign brings fast results

Editor:

Regarding the article about the washrooms in Callis Hall, it is interesting to note that nothing was done while the students complained through the proper channels at Desert Towers about the closing of the washing facilities. We were told not to complain to the Head Resident or Brother Ashton because they had no control over the closing of the washroom. Yet when the public became aware of our plight through the sign on the bell tower, it was amazing that within minutes after the sign was put up, the washroom was open and all machines were working. We can clearly see how Brother Ashton, "had no control over the situation," and we would like to thank Deseret Towers and maintenance, "for not punishing anyone."

In regards to Mr. Doug Bro[illegible] remarks in last Wednesday's lette[illegible] the editor, regarding Randy Glea[illegible] and Bob Bellus' attempts to "soli[illegible] appeal for the up-coming ASB[illegible] studentbody elections, to this I wo[illegible] like to say: bunk!

To clear the air of Mr. Bro[illegible] clearly uninformed statement[illegible] would like to say that I have had[illegible] pleasure of knowing Mr. Gleave[illegible] over eight years, and I can s[illegible] without reservation that he would[illegible] deceive anyone, even for the purpo[illegible] competing in the up-coming ASB[illegible] elections.

If Mr. Brown had taken the time[illegible] would have found that it was not[illegible] purpose of these two gentlemen[illegible] falsely deceive the "freshmen" in[illegible] University. Both gentlemen [illegible] merely trying to help those individ[illegible] who are tired of sitting in front o[illegible] TV set, watching reruns of the Inc[illegible] ble Hulk.

During the up-coming elect[illegible] there is sure to be several h[illegible] emotional statements made abou[illegible] basic character of those concerned[illegible] dents who have enough "guts" to s[illegible] up for what they believe is good fo[illegible] university.

Hopefully, as the elections [illegible] near, we as students will be ab[illegible] separate emotion from wo[illegible] ignorance from charity, and per[illegible] we can select those people who[illegible] give their all for Brigham Y[illegible] University.
